THE CONVENTION.

The Columns Remain Unbroken Over Sunday—Garfield Will Not Allow His Name Used.

[Special dispatch to The Indianapolis News.]

CHICAGO, June 7.—The adjournment on Saturday, without ballot, created fears that Sunday work might materially change the situation; but although the day was occupied in ardent proselyting, the indications are that the relative strength of the candidates is unaltered. The southern and other doubtful delegations were wired and lined at the Palmer house yesterday, and the senatorial syndicate, with Conkling as spokesman, made a round of visits to all southern headquarters late at night. They were very effusive towards the colored men. Rumors of bribery filled the air yesterday, and for a time there was a wild panic, fostered and maintained by hundreds of wild and absurd rumors, having usually no foundation in fact.

To-day the skies are clear, and heads seem to be balanced. While shrewd management will be required, it looks as if Grant's defeat was sure. The Blaine men, if not gaining yesterday, at least held their own. There is good reason to believe the Grant latter men are blustering loudly about hanging on indefinitely, fighting it out, and all that sort of thing; but they concede that Blaine has more votes on the start, and all the talk sounds like the bluster of desperation. If they propose to name the nominees they may have to act very quickly to beat Blaine. On the other hand the Blaine men feel confident that their vote will increase from the start; that they will gain more votes from Pennsylvania, New York and some southern states, beginning on the second ballot.

BLAINE WILL WITHDRAW IF NECESSARY.

If they find Grant gains and Blaine loses, they are prepared to withdraw entirely, if it is necessary to beat the third term. This is the truth. Without Blaine's candidacy it would have been impossible to have prevented the overwhelming success of third-termism, and he now stands ready to give a proof of his devotion to party and country, by leaving the field to any other, rather than to prove an obstacle to the defeat of imperialism. Blaine deserves well of his country and may deserve better if this last and highest proof of patriotism is given. The Sherman men are hopeful that between Grant and Blaine the boom will come to them; but it is not much more than a possibility. If Blaine and Grant go down Washburne and Edmunds stand well. Garfield would choose if Ohio would aid him; but so long as Sherman stands he will not, and it would be difficult to bring him out. He does not wish it himself.

In the Indiana delegation Little has gone home, leaving a Blaine alternate, so that on the first ballot Grant will get one vote. After that Studebaker will support him, fulfilling his instructions, he claims, by voting for Blaine once General Harrison is talked of for vice president, but will not permit the use of his name. Washburne is also favorably talked of for vice.

THE FIRST BALLOT.

Grant leads in the first ballot, three hundred and five (305), Blaine two hundred and ninety-two (292), Sherman ninety-three (93).

NO BREAK IN THE RANKS.

The forces still hold out stalwartly. Nothing can be accomplished before a recess, and a combination must be made. The vote scatters but little, and then only by one delegate trading for one vote for his man and returning it on the next ballot. The New York vote was polled again on the 18th ballot to find who the Grant bolter was. The temper in favor of a recess is growing, and a motion just made was carried until 5 o'clock.

[General press report.]

CHICAGO, June 7.—The fifth day's session of the republican convention began nearly an hour late. At 10:45, President Hoar in the chair. The day is bright, sunny and comfortable, and the main floor, galleries and streets are as crowded as at any time during the convention.

As usual, the entrance of Senators Garfield and Conkling was marked by hand clapping and other indications of favor on the part of the audience.

Rev. Charles Hall Everett of Plymouth Congregational church of this city offered prayer. The chairman announced all railroad fares extended to the delegates for the return of the delegates to their homes, so that they might use their return tickets another day after the close of the convention, whenever they might be. The reading clerk read the 5th and 6th resolutions of the platform by request of some delegates who had misapprehended their purport.

Mr. Blaine moved the convention proceed, under the rules, to ballot for a candidate for president. Mr. Conkling inquired whether it was not a matter of course that we now proceed to ballot without any recess. The chair did not understand.

Mr. Conkling said then he seconded the motion. The chair before putting the motion said this was the most important act in the convention, and he would do it without bloodshed and strife. Here it might be done with decorum in peace and in order. He alluded to the impression which would be produced on those living on our shores if the election of a chief magistrate be conducted with peace, with dignity, with quiet.

(Applause.) The chair therefore trusts that every delegate would be content to be the convention or here as witness of its proceedings, will feel that the character of his country as affected by the property and order of his conduct.

The vote was then taken and it was unanimously decided to proceed to vote. The clerk then read the 5th rule respecting the taking of the vote, and which abolishes the unit rule and then the 7th rule in regard to changing votes. The roll call then began.

When New York was called Mr. Conkling stated it would be better that the roll be called for New York, as under the instructions of the state convention he was required to cast the vote for Blaine on the 17th ballot.

3:14 p. m.—New York has thrown but 50 for Grant on the 17th ballot. Blaine is getting one more vote. Great cheering.

THE FIRE RECORD.

Annual Report of Chief Engineer Pendergast for the Year Ending May 31, 1880.

An Excellent Showing.

The annual report of John G. Pendergast, chief fire engineer, for the year ending May 31, 1880, is a most interesting and valuable document. It shows the progress of the fire department during the past year, and the results of the various campaigns. The report is a valuable record of the work of the department, and a valuable guide for the future.

The following table exhibits the number of alarms responded to during the year, the number of fires extinguished, and the amount of property saved. The following table exhibits the number of alarms responded to during the year, the number of fires extinguished, and the amount of property saved.
